Special session (workshop): Theoretical and empirical issues in the study of clause size

Ever since the early days of generative grammar, the size of clauses (in particular, embedded and non-finite) has been an issue of ongoing interest.

Oversimplifying to a certain degree, two main strands of research may be identified in the literature: one that assumes that certain operations apply in order to reduce a full-fledged clause (i.e. a CP), and one that assumes that predicates select/embed structures smaller than CPs (i.e. a TP, a VoiceP, a vP, etc.).

There is a large body of work, both theoretically and descriptively oriented, favouring (variants of) one of the two strands, notably, restructuring and clause reduction (see Aissen & Perlmutter 1976; Rizzi 1978; Cinque 1999; Wurmbrand 2001), exfoliation (Pesetsky 2021), complex predicate formation in various languages (for Romance languages, see Sheehan 2016; Dragomirescu et al. 2022), subjunctives in the Balkan languages (e.g., the truncated CP analysis of the Romanian subjunctive, Alboiu 2007), irrealis non-finite complements in southern Italian dialects (e.g., Ledgeway & Lombardi 2014, Taylor 2014, Groothuis 2022), etc.

The goal of this workshop is to bring together researchers interested in various topics concerning the size of clauses. Both theoretical and more empirically oriented papers are welcome, as long as they contribute to a better understanding of the issues concerning clausal size.

Call for papers: submissions are invited for 20-minute (+ 10 minutes for discussion) oral presentations. Please use the attached participation form to submit an abstract that does not exceed 500 words by April 15, 2024.
